EDITORIALS.

Today the Prelude, which we hope has become an established feature of our college world, enters upon its third year. Two years is not a long period of time, and surely the Prelude cannot be called an aged publication. At the same time it is a precocious infant, and the two short years of its life have been years of successful growth and progress goodly to note.

It is surely gratifying to see the marked development in college enterprise at Wellesley, and the change from individual to general interests among her students. Proof of this is seen in the successful career of the re-organized Greek letter societies, in the enthusiasm which greeted the appearance of the Senior Legenda, and in the cordial student support which has been given to the Prelude. A college paper is published in the interests of the students, and to be a success it requires their earnest sympathy and support. It represents them not only in the college world, but in the much larger world outside the college walls; it unites them with the students of other colleges, and is therefore, an important factor in student life. It should be a worthy representative of the college, and a true exponent of student work and student achievement. This, however, is impossible without the hearty support and earnest co-operation of the entire college world.

We are all proud of our Alma Mater, and of the high rank which she holds among other colleges. We are all proud of the scholarly work and reputation of her students, and we are surely all desirous that her college publication be worthy of her. Thus the editors, who today take great pleasure in presenting the Prelude once more before Wellesley and Wellesley's friends, do so with the hope and expectation that it may receive the careful consideration of every student, and her earnest support and co-operation.

The editors of the Prelude for the coming year have deemed it best to make several changes in the form of publication. It is always hard to depart from long-established precedent and from the customs of one's predecessors, and we do it with no little trepidation. The change, however, has not been made without careful deliberation and discussion, both on the part of the editors and on the part of many of the friends of the Prelude, and we feel that it will be for the best interests of our college paper.

The time is not far distant, we hope, when Wellesley can support two publications, a news sheet and a literary number. It is impossible to have a thoroughly successful paper which is a combination of news items and literary productions, and yet both departments are equally necessary in college journalism. Wellesley is not at present ready to support two papers, and thus solve the problem of successful college journalism, but the editors have devised a plan which they feel is a step towards this solution.

During the ensuing year the Prelude will consist practically of two issues, one appearing monthly, and the other weekly, between the periods of the monthly publications. The weekly issue will be devoted exclusively to matters of college interest. It will contain an Editorial department, which will discuss subjects of importance to the entire college world; a News department, which will be considerably enlarged, and which will contain a bulletin of the general college appointments for the ensuing year; an Intercollegiate department, which will be devoted to discussions and criticism of our several Exchanges, and give opportunity for original work on the part of the editor; a column of book reviews; the Alumnæ Notes, and the Waban Ripples. The monthly issue will be necessarily much larger than the weekly issues, and distinctively a literary number. It will be the aim of the editors to secure the best literary productions, and to raise the standard of the paper as high as possible, since they will have a longer period of time for its preparation than in previous years.

Such will be the form of the Wellesley Prelude for the coming year. It is a new venture, and like all new ventures liable to blunders and errors, but we recommend it to the considerate attention of all the friends of the college, and we crave their indulgence.

Among the many changes that the new year has brought in the policy of our college, none, perhaps, will be more acceptable to the student than the change in regard to the library regulations. Last year the Wellesley world was agitated for several weeks over the question, "Shall our library be opened on Sunday?" It was very strongly felt among many of the students that the closing of the library on that day was a great deprivation, and the change which practically does away with that restriction, will be gladly welcomed by all. Books may now be drawn from the General, Gertrude, and Art libraries on Saturday afternoon, from 4 o'clock to 5.30, for use on Sunday. They will be charged and cancelled by a library attendant, and must be returned before 9 o'clock on Monday evening. In order that the books may be returned promptly, a fine of fifty cents a day will be incurred by failure to comply with this regulation. Application for books must be made personally or by a written order. A few of the books in the library are restricted from circulation. These are:

All volumes of the original collection donated by the founders of the college.

All works included in the Powell collection.

All works included in the alcove of North American languages.

All works enclosed in the Dutch Cabinet.

All elegantly bound sets.

All works of larger size than quartos.

All volumes of $5.00 or more in value.

All bound periodicals.

A QUESTION WORTHY OF DISCUSSION.

As is known to many of us, communications in regard to the formation of an intercollegiate athletic association were received from Bryn Mawr last June. These communications were presented to the different classes and received with approval, but as it was so near the end of the college year, it was deemed best to take no decided action. Now that college has opened, it may be well to discuss the subject fully before a decision is called for.

At first thought it might seem that an intercollegiate athletic association among college women would be most desirable. There are pros and cons to this question as to all others, and these should be freely discussed. Let every member of the college who is interested give the points on the side she takes, and that will enable the less well informed to come to some decision. A study of the athletic associations among men's colleges might give us some points.

It is eminently true that such an association would encourage athletic sports and lend an interest that does not always attend them. That it would be well to encourage such sports among Wellesley students, no one would question who noticed the oft deserted tennis courts and idle boats during the past year, or who marvelled at the lack of interest taken in even the champion games. Wellesley offers fine opportunities for all kinds of sports to her students. No woman's college in the country can boast such a body of water as our own lake Waban. The fine roads in the vicinity offer great inducements to the wheelmen, and our appliances for tennis are not far below the average. It is true that there is room for improvement and this improvement would have to be made before we could enter a contest. (For example—our racing would have to be done in boats, not in arks or tubs.) But laboring under the comparatively few disadvantages that we do, as far as facilities for sports are concerned, Wellesley is not far in the background.

But there are other questions than those concerning facilities to be answered. How about the times and places of the meets? To my mind these are the most perplexing. Our college duties could not, according to precedent, be interfered with. We must remember that we do not enjoy the same privilege on this score that our brothers do. This would leave us with only our vacations to choose from. Christmas vacation is out of the question for games of any sort and Easter vacation is not much better. Let some one unravel this part of the tangle. The places could be easily decided upon, could the time be arranged.

I have not endeavored to set forth the advantages and disadvantages of this association, but have merely offered a few suggestions for consideration. Wellesley wants everything that is good, but we want to know that a thing is good before we adopt it. Our athletics need an impetus; they are not what they ought to be nor what they can be. Let the discussion tend to awaken our interest, even if it does not result in the formation of a league.

N. G. Pullen, '92.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Why are the Freshmen so cheerful this year? Why do we not see the red eyes and doleful looks of former generations? Are old traditions passing away and freshman hearts becoming hardened! Or is it because at last there is no "Freshman rain" or cold gray sky to vex the hearts of our Freshmen? Let us hope that '95 has at last established a precedent and has resolved to do away with the down-pour which has always accompanied the tears of their predecessors. We cordially welcome '95 to Wellesley halls and may they soon learn to love and honor her as she deserves.

Amid the multitude of faces to be seen on every hand, one misses many old ones and finds many, which had vanished for a while, returned. We feel the loss of '91 sorely, but as '92 fills her place and '95 and '96 join the ranks of Wellesley girls, we realize that these things must be, and we are comforted by the thought that '91 is still with us in spirit, and that in the hearts of the one hundred and ninety-eight Freshmen and fifty-four new specials Wellesley will soon establish her shrine.

Many upper-class girls have returned this year bringing their sisters to swell the ranks of '95. Miss Lance, '92, brings two sisters, Miss Godfrey, Miss Meyer, Miss Anderson, Miss Dennis and Miss Jones, each one. Among the '91 girls who have sent their sisters to fill their places are Miss Blakeslee and Miss Sykes.

There are changes in the faculty as well as among the students. President Shafer is again with us. Professor Wenckebach is again at her place in the German department. There is also a new teacher in this department Fraulein Wyneken of Ilfeld Hanover. Fraulein Eggers will rest another year before returning to her work. Fraulein Muller returned from her summer abroad on the morning of Sunday, Sept. 13, after a very rough passage of fourteen days. Miss Chapin is enjoying her "Sabbatical year" abroad and Mrs. Irvine takes her place as acting professor. Miss Gelston has returned to take some classes in Freshman Greek, and in addition to this will assist in the Latin department. Miss Emily Clarke will not return this year, but will be at the head of the Ladies' department in Olivet College, Olivet, Michigan. She will also take some classes in Latin there. Miss Lucia Clarke will have no classes in Latin but she will retain her Bible classes.

In the Literature department Prof. Bates, who has returned from abroad, fills the vacancy made by the resignation of Miss Hodgkins. Otherwise the department remains the same except that Miss Sherwood will take charge of Literature IV in addition to her classes in Rhetoric. Miss Julina Hall of Worcester, Mass., will have charge of the new course in Rhetoric open to the Freshmen.

Miss Calkins, who formerly had charge of classes in Freshman Greek, has returned and joined the Philosophy department with a course in Psychology for the Seniors. Miss Hurll will not return this year to her classes in Freshman Ethics.

Miss Katherine Gleason of the class of '91, has returned to college to assist in the Chemistry department as a tutor. Miss Elizabeth Hoyt of '91 will assist as a tutor in the Mathematics department.

Fraulein Helena Meyer, instructor in the German department last year, has accepted a position at the Howard Seminary, Bridgewater, Mass., and Fraulein Emilie Eggers of the same department is to be at Stanley Hall, Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Rosabel C. Temple, who has been Dr. Barker's efficient helper at the Eliot, goes to Cushing Academy, Ashburnham, Mass.

Saturday evening, according to the old and established custom, the Sophomores presented the Freshmen with souvenirs of welcome. Nasturtiums enough could not be procured, so that the ingenuity of the class of '94 was put to the test. The result was very pretty. A card about the size of an ordinary calling card was tied in the corner with a bow of light green ribbon, with the inscription in silver, "temps" and welcome from '94, to be read "beau temps." Grave doubts were entertained as to whether the bow of ribbon would sufficiently suggest the "bean," but we all know that the Freshmen are very brilliant this year and that explanations are unnecessary.

Many are the improvements which we see around us. Both Dana Hall and Norumbega are immaculate in new coats of paint, and lest the paint should be too attractive Dana Hall has added some new fire escapes.

The hearts of the members of Phi Sigma are sore on account of the absence of Miss Ada Woolfolk, their newly elected president. Miss Woolfolk will not return to Wellesley this year.

Sunday morning, Sept. 13, Rev. Henry Parsons of Toronto, Canada, preached in the Chapel at 11 o'clock. Our chapel presented a more beautiful appearance than is usual for even "Flower Sunday," and how fervently did all Nature without and the flowers within tell of the unspeakable love of our Lord! The whole appearance of the assemblage was one which suggested only cause for thankfulness. The simple text of Flower Sunday "God is love," was never more earnestly nor more helpfully presented. God's love to us in Christ and its manifestation through us is the everlasting love of our unchangeable Father; it is in every sense a sacrificial love, human and divine, a love that attracts from the lower to that which is higher and more satisfying when once our eyes are opened to see "the King in His beauty." The love of Christ is completing and transforming, and above all absorbing, so that changed from character to character we find greatest joy in greatest service, and the perfect peace that is the portion of those whose minds are stayed on Him.

Instead of the regular Sunday afternoon meeting in Stone Hall parlor a praise meeting was held at five o'clock in the chapel. It was led by Miss Emerson, '92, and as we sat among the flowers and sang and spoke our praise, we felt the deep truth of the thought which Miss Emerson brought out. "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage." The usual Vesper Service was held at half past six and at half past seven, Mr. Parsons gave a most interesting Bible reading, tracing the moving of the Holy Spirit beginning with chaos and the Creation and following it on down through the ages. We count ourselves happy in the pleasure of a Sabbath that led away from the easily trodden paths of homesick mooding into the invigorating cheer of strong and healthful thought. Not a small part of this pleasure is due to Mr. Parsons' share in this the first of Wellesley Sabbaths to so many of our number.

Miss Van Uleck will not return to college this year, she has gone abroad to pursue a course in Mathematics at Cambridge, England.

Many old girls have returned this year to complete their course, Miss Louise Pope and Miss Netta Stockwell, formerly of '91, have joined '92, Miss Clara Count '98 and Miss Jennie Fuller, '86 are back. Miss Grace Dewey and Miss Kate Taylor, formerly of '90, have also returned to take their degrees with '93.

Fire seems to be the thought of people in general this year, for besides the new fire escapes at Dana Hall, a new engine house has been erected in the village.

A new feature of the opening week this year was the reception given by the Christian Association to all who are not members of the association. That the affair might be thoroughly general and informal committees were appointed from the different houses, who endeavored to have every person, faculty, new student or old, who was not a member of the association invited by one who was. This was accomplished as well as it could be among so many and in addition a general invitation was given. The reception was held from seven until nine in the first floor centre. It had been suggested that each one should wear a card with her name and home address upon it so that the usual difficulties of understanding names might be avoided. This was carried out and it was so great a success that one almost wishes the cards would be worn continually for several days. Those who received were the officers of the association, Miss Jones, Miss Chandler, Miss Gage, Miss Hand, Miss Flora Randolph, Miss Goddard, Miss Lance and Miss Wilson. The whole affair was a delightful success. About eight o'clock all the Sophomores mysteriously disappeared, leaving their guests to be amused as best they could. Soon the Wellesley cheer was heard coming from the direction of the north door and it was discovered that the Sophomores had gathered at the north porch to serenade the Freshmen. After cheering for '95 and singing "Alma Mater," "Belinda Clarissa" and "Vive la '95" they proceeded to the south porch where there were some more cheers and the songs "Lake of Gray," "Romeo and Juliet," "The students at Vassar" and some good advice to the Freshmen to the air of "Who did Swallow Jonah." After another hearty cheer for '95 the Sophomores dispersed and the serenade was over, but we may be sure that the good will to '95 which '94 thus displayed will ever increase.

Miss Aumark has returned to college and will take classes in Physics.

The Prelude feels heavily the loss of two of the members of its staff, Miss Cora Stewart, Special, and Miss Emily Fogg, '93. The Prelude is not alone in its sorrow for all the classes have lost prominent members. The Senior class looses Miss Gertrude Smith, Miss Annie May Henderson, Miss Helen Drake, Miss Myra Jacobus and Miss Madeline Freeman. '93 has lost her beloved President, Miss Bessie Kellogg, and also Miss Bertha Brush, Miss Clarissa Benson, Miss Clara Benson, Miss Florence Hallam, Miss Ely, Miss Emily Hoyt, Miss Mabel Hayes, Miss Alice Doe and Miss Mabel Johnson. Of all the classes '94 is the greatest looser. Her two secretaries Miss Georgia Lamme and Miss Marianne Weston return no more. Two members of the executive committee, Miss Ruth Toof and Miss Adelaide Miller, and Miss Ada Belfield have deserted. Miss Alice Holden, '94 and Miss Bertha Straight, '95 will not return.

Many "old girls" have returned to visit for a short time. Among them are Miss Mabel Godfrey, '90, Miss Sue Child, '90, Miss Ruth Abbott, '89, Miss May Gilman,'89, Miss Ruth Morrill, '89, Miss Annie Smith, '90, Miss Helen, Mourse, '89, Miss H. St. Barbe Brooks, '91, Miss Louise Saxton, '91, Miss Elsie Thalheimer, '89, Miss Emily W. Leonard, Special, '95-'89, Miss Helen Hour, '89, Miss Lizzie Leach, '86, Miss M. E. Wardwell, '91, and Miss May Banta, '89.

On Monday evening Mr. Parsons gave a second most interesting Bible reading in the chapel on the Second Coming of Christ.

Miss Bertha Palmer, the president of '91, was at the college on Monday, Sept. 14.

Miss Minnie Morss, Miss Katherine Gleason and Miss Elizabeth Hoyt of '91 have returned to Wellesley as graduate students.

Miss Florence Converse, formerly of '92, has returned to pursue Specials courses.

Miss Mary Wright, formerly of '92, has returned to join her own class.

Miss Martha Fletcher and Miss Mabel Bartleson, both formerly of '94, have returned to join '95.

Miss Annie May Henderson of '92 has accepted a position to teach Latin and Greek in the Norwood High school, Norwood Mass.

Miss Fannie Sanderson, formerly a Special, has joined the ranks of '93.

A novel feature of the college year will be a popular course of five readings and lectures offered by the department of Elocution for the benefit of the Monroe Fund. It will be opened October 23, by Mrs. Erving Winslow whose powerful rendering of Ibsen has recently been so popular. November 9, Mr. George Riddle of Cambridge, who a short time since gave his one thousandeth public reading, will appear for the first time before a Wellesley audience. Mr. Leland T. Powers, the incomparable personator, comes in January, and a lecture will be given in this course by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore whose name stands for eloquence, strength and womanliness. The fifth entertainment will be announced later. Tickets to the entire course will be offered to the students for $1, reserved seats $1.50.

OUR EXCHANGES.

As the time to take up again the editorial pen draws near, we begin to realize the truth of the remark so often made by our contemporaries, "Some attention ought to be paid to exchanges." And why not? The Prelude sees no reason. Our exchange department hitherto has been merely clippings, shreds of information which he that runs may read. But now, just to show that there is some one alive at this end of the route, from the editor's corner of observation there will come forth at times acknowledgments and comments, and thus by the friction of ideas zest may be added to our intercourse.

Wellesley this time takes the lead in reassembling her children, and so it is that we find on the table only bulky Commencement Numbers, usually opened with an editorial on "How to spend the Summer Vacation." There is much "highly entertaining" and "instructive literature" (as the exchange column is wont to say) to be found in these last numbers, especially is those poetical effusions labelled "Class Poem," some of which alas! have neither rhyme nor reason.

Some liberties have been taken with "Dramatic Monologues after Browning." (One budding poet refers thus to his Alma Mater.

"Thy sons, ever singing
Shall get all the heavens to ringing
With thy glory."

Another bids his class-mates:

"Smile, smile, hearts bereft,
Smile thro' falling tears!"

But these may be like the song of the swan, last as well as first, and those whom the muse seems to love will perhaps die young. Some members have suddenly become retrospective, historical; some merely chronicle in brief terms that all-important series of events which happen on college birthdays, while others deal largely with present statistics, "imperative needs of the college," or "marked steps in advance." One lengthy article shows by conclusive proofs that the institution referred to has always heen synonymous with progress. We find many a record of last struggles on athletic battlefields, and here and there one last editorial plea for no examinations. A prospective, already lonesome B. A., writes a mournful Ode to Solitude. One is impressed with the manifold ways of saying the same thing. There are the same references to "the sweet, sad culmination," the sailing out into high seas, the crossing of the line, the sweet sorrow of parting, that have been told in a different way ever since the college world began to graduate. One and all have fallen into musing on the greatness of the never-to-be-forgotten past, and the certainty of a glorious future. But then, we are all egotists.

AULD ACQUAINTANCE.

The Prelude sends friendly greeting to all old friends far and near at the opening of this new year, and begs for their help in making the paper, and especially their, own peculiar department of it, still more successful than it has been in the past. At our last Alumnæ meeting a suggestion was made, which was warmly supported by Miss Tufts and Miss Roberts, the two previous Alumnæ editors, that some member of each class should be appointed to assist in gathering Alumnæ news. It was thought that the Alumnæ would be more ready to send news about themselves to one of their own class than to the editor, with whom they might have no personal acquaintance. No formal action was taken at the meeting, but some of the classes have since made such an appointment. As far as reported these are:

Miss Annie Sybil Montague,'79.
Miss Katherine Lee Bates, '80.
Mrs. Maria Blodgett Bean, '81.
Miss Edith True, '87.
Miss Katherine E. Horton, '89.

It would be a very great help, if the presidents of the other classes would select somebody to collect all items of interest about members of the class and forward these at short intervals to the Alumnæ editor. The Prelude would be glad to publish a complete list of the persons thus chosen. It is hoped by this new method to increase both the length and interest of the Auld Acquaintance column and our only regret is that some similar arrangement is not possible for the large body of special students who have formerly been members of the college. We trust that they will still continue to aid us by sending any items about themselves, or any other Wellesley student, directly to the editor. In short the latter entreats the charitable judgment and hearty support of all "the old girls."

We have been making history fast, as the saying is, even during these vacation days. '89 boasts of a class baby and '90 of a class bride, while '91 and even some of the younger classes show signs of not being left behind in the march of progress.

Among the Wellesley people in Europe the coming year will be Misses Grace Dodge and Caroline Crocker, '86, Marietta Goodwin, Carrie Spencer and Bessie Ballard, '87, Mary Bean and Maud Fales, '88, Harriet Weaver, '89, Maria Baldwin, '91, Annie Knapp, formerly ot '93, and Georgia Lamme, '94.

Miss Louise Hannum, '91, holds a fellowship at Cornell this year.

Miss F. May West, '91, will be a student at the New York College for the training of teachers.

Miss Harriet Rice, '87, received the degree of M. D., at the New York Medical College last June, and has been appointed house physician at the New England Hospital for women and children.

BORN.

In Philadelphia, July 10th, a daughter to Mrs. Rebecca Boyd Hensel, '89.

WABAN RIPPLES.

Visitors to our college differ. Many seek information, almost as many are full of funny facts(?). All that follows has been "kindly contributed" by such guests.

"Who is buried in the centre?" (The palms were on their summer vacation.)

Englishman? "Will you accept a small fee for kindly conducting me about the college?"

A favorite question (To be answered in the affirmative if you wish to make your college interesting.) "Was Mrs. Browning a student here?"

"When Miss Robbins (who was probably a student) painted the panels of the frieze in the Browning room, did she take them out or did she just climb a ladder and do it?"

A lady, one of a large party, informed the office-girl, and persisted in the assertion, that the Rosetta stone in the library contained the Lord's Prayer in Greek, Hieroglyphics and English.

Two gentlemen and a lady were extremely charmed with the picture of "Coney Island" in the south centre corridor. American conquests continue.

A certain young gentleman thought that the "Backwoodsman" would make a fine base-ball player.

Another wished to know if Harriet Martineau was the last head of the college.

Some visitors are being shown the Faculty parlor. Its influence on artistic sensibilities is so marked that when one of the ladies has her attention directed to the statue of Elaine she can restrain her feelings no longer, and exclaims most enthusiastically. "Oh, look at them toes!!" She proceeds in rapture to the statue near the palms, where she loftily informs her friends, to their great edification, that Harriet Martineau was a student of this college, "you know."

Several visitors have been quite positive that the furniture in the Browning room was presented by the Empress of Japan.

The Cumaean Sibyl would probably be as much surprised as anybody if she knew that a guest once summed up his judgemnt of her in the peculiarly fitting word, "pretty."

A guest wished to know if the path leading from the south porch was what they called "Lovers' Lane." And poor Tupelo was so mortified thereat that a large portion of it sank into the lake. If any one doubts this she may go and see for herself how much isn't still at the Point.
